David the king of Israel, who when he was (still) a shepherd sat on a rock and played the flute, do re mi fa mi fa re And the baby-goats and the baby-sheep, she-goats and the sheep bleated me-me-me-me-me-me, what a magical tune

The world was filled with bleating, of the baby-goats and the baby-sheep of the sheep and the ewes, by day and night

David put down his flute, with a silent song he sounded his voice lu lu lu lu lu, and everyone fell asleep
