(Ena Mytho tha-sas po(h))

I will tell you a story that we learned when we were kids: Once upon a time there was a man who went to the wilderness. From that moment on he lived in the mountains hunting because of hatred for women. He didn't descend into the village. To the story that you told us, I will tell another one; Once upon a time there lived a man with no home or place. He had a fear for men, and a terrible hatred, yet all of the women I believe he truly loved.
